I like dumb comedies. One of my favorite of all time is Caddyshack from the early '80s.

It's a VERY silly comedy about a private country club. It stars Chevy Chase, Rodney Dangerfield and Bill Murray as the dim-witted assistant groundskeeper, Carl.

The head groundskeeper orders Carl to kill the gopher that's tearing up the golf course.

So late one night, Carl's molding plastic explosives into the shape of rabbits and squirrels.

And he says these words of wisdom...

My enemy is an animal. In order to conquer him, I have to think like an animal...and whenever possible...to look like one. I've got to get inside this dude's pelt and crawl around for a few days.

Then he laughs maniacally.

Like I said, it's a dumb movie and Carl's pretty darn dumb.

But he's 100% right about thinking like your enemy.

Who's your enemy when it comes to your credit score?

Well, it's the credit reporting agencies.

If you want to raise your score, you can't think like YOU, you must think like THEM.

How do they think ?

What do they want to see to raise your score?

Well, one thing they absolutely do NOT want to see is errors on your credit report.

Those errors can drop your score from 50 to 300 points!

And if you leave errors on your report, you're just not thinking like your enemy!

What's the best way to get those score-killing errors removed?

When I signed up with the Credit Pros my credit was absolutely horrible. It's probably gone up 150 points since then. I was able to buy a house, a new car, and get approved for student loans that otherwise I wouldn't have been able to get.
