
[CH] Want to learn more about email copy?

Derek Johanson <derek@copyhour.com>

Hey,

I hope you're settling into the CopyHour assignments and getting used to hand copying. Do you hate me yet? :-)

I don't normally send an email like this but for some reason during this Spring 2017 round of CopyHour I've received a larger-than-normal amount of questions on "getting clients" and "getting immediate ROI" on your copywriting skills.

I know that the first few weeks of learning any new skill are really exciting.

I remember when I first started cycling. I read every single website I could... I read all the books... and spent a ton of money buying all the clothing & gear I needed.

When I first got into copywriting I listened to podcasts, read all the blogs and Halbert's newsletters... bought all of the books and courses I could. I was dreaming about copy at night. I was hooked.

You might be experiencing the same thing right now - you can't get enough copy.

And, you might be wondering what type of copywriting is the simplest to learn that will have the fastest ROI.

I think the answer is "email copy".

And I know I have the perfect email copy product to recommend for you.

If you're all set with just CopyHour right now, that's totally cool.

But if you want to learn more about writing persuasive emails and/or getting clients (where you write their emails) then tap the link below.

I'll add a tag to your name and send you just two emails explaining the product... one will come immediately and then one email will be sent tomorrow.

And that'll be it.

Yep Derek, I want to learn more about email copy and this product

Cheers,

- Derek